Closing the Generation Gap

Around the world, it's common for generations of a family to think and behave (57) _____. Teenagers have different experiences to their parents. For example, the technology teens use is still new and can be strange for parents. These differences can cause a generation gap leading to arguments in some homes. But, here are some tips for parents who want to close that gap.

Firstly, communication is important. Parents who can't talk to their teens easily need to start a conversation. Start with something small – ask your teen about their day at school. The more often you do this, the easier it gets. Then, you can move onto (58) _____ things such as the problems your teen faces. Listen to them and try to understand how they feel.

Talking together means spending time together, but you can do other things, too. Take an interest in your teen's hobbies and interests. It isn't easy keeping up with all (59) ___, but it's definitely worth it because it allows you to have a better relationship with your teen. Remember, you shouldn't (60) _____.

_____ your teen years to your teen's. It doesn't help because things today are so different. In fact, for modern teens, life is no walk in the park (61)_____ social media and the Internet.

VII. Read the following passage and do the tasks below

{I} Throughout the nineteenth century and into the twentieth, citizens of the United States maintained a bias against big cities. Most lived on farms and in small towns and believed cities to be centers of corruption, crime, poverty, and moral degradation. {II} Their distrust was caused, in part, by a notional ideology that proclaimed farming the greatest occupation and rural living superior to urban living. {III} Gradually, economic reality overcame ideology. Thousands abandoned the precarious life on the farm for more secure and better paying jobs in the city. But when these people migrated from the countryside, they carried their fears and suspicions with them. {IV} These new urban population, already convinced that cities were overwhelmed with great problems, eagerly embraced the progressive reforms that promised to bring order out of the chaos of the city.

One of many reforms came in the area of public utilities. Water and sewerage systems were usually operated by municipal governments, but the gas and electric networks were privately owned. Reformers feared that the privately owned utility companies would charge exorbitant rates for these essential services and deliver them only to people who would afford them, some city and state governments responded by regulating the utility companies, but a number of cities began to supply these services themselves. Proponents of these reforms argued that public ownership and regulation would insure widespread access to these utilities and guarantee a fair price.

While some reforms focused on government and public behavior, others looked at the cities as a whole. Civic leaders, convinced that physical environment influenced human behavior, argued that cities should develop master plans to guide their future growth and development. City planning was nothing new, but the rapid industrialization and urban growth of the late nineteenth century took place without any consideration for order. Urban renewal in the twentieth century followed several courses. Some cities introduced plans to completely rebuild the city core. Most other cities contented themselves with zoning plans for regulating future growth. Certain parts of town were restricted to residential use, while others were set aside for industrial or commercial development.

Our body clock, also known as the circadian rhythm, is an internal system that regulates our sleep-wake cycle, influencing various physiological processes. This biological clock is primarily influenced by external cues such as light and temperature, aligning our body's functions with the day-night cycle. For instance, exposure to natural light in the morning signals the body to wake up and be alert, while the absence of light in the evening triggers the production of melatonin, a hormone that promotes sleep.

Maintaining a consistent circadian rhythm is crucial for overall health. Disruptions to it, such as those caused by shift work, travel across time zones, or irregular sleep patterns, can lead to various health issues. These disruptions can affect sleep quality, mood, and cognitive functions, and over time, may contribute to more serious conditions such as obesity, diabetes, and cardiovascular diseases. Therefore, it is essential to follow a regular sleep schedule, ensure exposure to natural light during the day, and minimize light exposure at night to keep the body clock in sync.

Moreover, the circadian rhythm also regulates other bodily functions, including hormone release, eating habits, and digestion. Studies have shown that our body clock influences the timing of meals, and eating at irregular times can disrupt metabolic processes. For optimal health, it is recommended to eat meals at consistent times each day and avoid late-night eating. By understanding and respecting it, we can improve our sleep quality, boost our overall health, and enhance our daily performance.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct to each of the question .

It is not surprising that the birthplace of cola was the hot and humid American South. This region had long specialized in creating delicious soft drinks. A druggist in Atlanta, Georgia named John Pemberton created the most well-known drink brand in the world in the 1880s. However, it seems clear that he had no idea how big it would become.

Like many American pharmacists of the day, Pemberton was opposed to the drinking of alcohol and wanted to produce a stimulating soft drink. First, he made "the French Wine of Coca," made from the coca leaf. Then he began to experiment with the cola nut. Eventually, he managed to make a combination of the two that he thought was sweet, but not too sweet. Deciding that "the two C's would look well in advertising," he named it Coca-Cola.

Pemberton's invention caught on fairly quickly. By 1905, "Coke" was being advertised all over the country as "The Great Natural Temperance Drink." The drink enjoyed additional success since there was a large and popular temperance movement in the US at that time. In the 1920s, alcohol was outlawed, and sales of Coke rose significantly. However, they continued to rise even after the law was repealed. Another reason for Coke's popularity was good business sense. A year after he invented it, Pemberton had sold Coca-Cola to Asa Griggs Candler for only $283.26! Candler was a marketing genius, and by the time he sold the Coca-Cola Company in 1919, it was worth $25 million.
